GTR is a new company which aims to recycle waste glass collected on the Llyn Peninsula. Bottles, in particular, are collected from hotels and pubs to be crushed/melted then imaginatively recycled into attractive products including coasters and clocks.

GTR is a private enterprise, employing local people, but it is also working in partnership with a Local Authority day care centre at Y Ffôr, where the bottles are initially cleaned and prepared for processing by clients. The finished products are sold through local craft shops, and the company is hoping to develop website sales.

This is an excellent example of a business being developed out of the need to examine our ways of dealing with waste, and of a business working in partnership with organisations from the public sector. The enterprise was developed following an identified need for a glass collection service from local hotels and pubs, something not currently (2004) available for businesses in Gwynedd.

Tips for others: Work with people of vision who are able to go to the heart of any matter. It is important to develop skills so that a business can grow.

Final words: GTR is a successful mixture of private enterprise, sustainability and a project that has the welfare of the area in mind.

Status of organisation: Private business

Area: North Wales
